So, who was responsible for allowing the removal of trees in the alley, and why was that allowed--or even necessary?

Is it possible to have contact information for the District representative who was engaged in allowing the removal of trees in the alleys? Older trees are far more protective against soil erosion than any new plantings. It also seems that the trees that were taken down in the alley would still be outside the perimeter of the Maret development and its plans for replanting. This is not just a concern for this development, but one that can have impacts on tree removal and development--in the face of extreme climate change--for DC overall.
