News of metrobus changes amplifies the value of volunteer drivers for the Northwest Neighborhood Village. NNV is currently advertising for more volunteer drivers.

19:40:18 From claudia russell to Everyone:

In the big picture department, wondering if there could be a neighborhood-like circulator to connect these long-stretch bus lines and Metro stops. We want to be able to frequent our local businesses. With the anticipated development of Connecticut Ave., the loss of parking, and a potentially aging population, this would be something to put in the mix for the long view.

For clarification, please, why is it now necessary for the M4 to run on weekends, and how frequently will these buses run?

Keep in mind that increased density improves the efficiency of transit resulting in better networks and increased use.

Two questions: 1) Given the longer-term plan for Nebraska and Utah: Where exactly would that go? That is a targeted area for overflow parking for the Maret development, is it not? 2) What percentage of visitors to DC use Capital Bikeshare? Thanks.

Perhaps, Greg cannot answer this, but how is it that Capitol Bikeshare has docking stations and the other companies, such as orange and lime, docking is not required? The orange and lime companies have scooters and bikes left around the neighborhood I have had to call the city several times to remove bikes left after many days.

Where does the bike replenishment trucks park when there are curbside bike lanes on both sides of the street and parking and loading zones are on the opposite side of the street and down a block?

Replying to "Two questions: 1) Gi..."

Hello Mary. 1. The proposed location is on the NE corner of the intersection. The developer there is paying for a station and paving a pad.

2. I do not have this information, but bikeshare is a very popular mode of transportation for our tourists

20:39:42 From Greg Matlesky to Everyone:

Replying to "Can anything be done..."

Is this in reference to "dockless" bikes and scooters? These are owned and operated by private operators, but managed by DDOT. If you see a misparked device in public space, you can submit a 311 request and companies are required to correct the issue within three hours.

Capital Bikeshare bikes are "docked", meaning they need to be returned to a station at the end of their trip so they should not be blocking sidewalks. One exception is our new ebikes, which are "hybrid", meaning they can be docked or locked out-of-station at a bike rack or other piece of street furniture for a $2 fee. We have found that the vast majority (I believe over 80%) of CaBi ebikes are docked at the end of their trips

Replying to "Perhaps, Greg cannot..."

Claudia, these are known as "dockless" bicycles and scooters and are owned and operated by private companies. Users have been required since October 2021 to lock their device to a bike rack or other piece of street furniture at the end of their trip, but we understand this does not always happen. If you come across a misparked device that is blocking a sidewalk or other access, you can submit a "Dockless Parking Complaint" in 311 that goes directly to the companies for correction within three hours.
